
It's difficult to live in a new city with little money.

I am concerned that I will not be able to cover all my expenses (rent, transportation, food, materials).

Getting around Bogotá is very complicated

Living in a student residence is very expensive.

I want to take advantage of this opportunity to study, even if it involves sacrifices.

I would like to live closer to the university so I don't waste two hours moving around

He sees buildings around the university campus

Websites and apps shows options for whole apartments, not rooms.

See other students who are also looking to save money or share accommodation.

Few options for housing.

See ads for rooms and residences near the university.

He feels frustrated because rents are very expensive.

You feel worried about having to accept uncomfortable or distant housing just because of the price.

He feels anxious about not finding a place before classes start.

He feels insecure because he doesn't know the city or its neighborhoods well.

Talk to family members to see if anyone can recommend a contact or provide initial support.

He asks students he had met about housing near the university

Call landlords to ask about prices and conditions.

Ask about housing at college residences